PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The summer allows us time to pause, reflect, and (hopefully) relax. As we work through the light reading we have put off over the course of a fast paced and ever increasing complex year, we need time to think about the good things, e.g., family, freedom, and intellectual curiosity.

The latter point of reflection and celebration is what binds our university family together. Learning and curiosity are the central features of our unique enterprise.

As we prepare for another school year, let us consider how fortunate we are to be in the teaching/learning business. No matter what changes confront us next year (and there will be some!), never lose sight of this special time and we educators share.

Life is indeed good!

Sincerely,
Michael E. Malone

TSUD appointed Regional Science Hub

Troy State University Dothan's new library will be the tri-state hub for the dissemination of K-12 science curriculum developed by Education Development Center, Inc. of Newton, Massachusetts, and funded by the National Science Foundation. As a regional site for the EDC K-12 Science Curriculum Dissemination Center, TSUD will introduce school districts to exemplary science instructional materials.

The Center targets school districts with limited previous exposure to exemplary, standards-based curricula and/or little experience with national science education reform efforts. The components of the Center -- seminars, follow-up support, and access to resources -- are part of a comprehensive program that supports districts in examining instructional materials for grades K-12.

Public schools teachers from Alabama, Florida, and Georgia will have an opportunity to review and borrow new textbooks, software, and teaching aids.

CONTINUING EDUCATION

TSUD Continuing Education, The Small Business Development Center at Troy State University (SBDC-TSU), and the Dothan Area Chamber of Commerce are cosponsoring the program "e-Business for Small Business" on Tuesday, August 21, 2001 from 8:30 AM - 4:30 p.m. The program will be held at the TSUD Continuing Education Center at Northside Mall. The one-day program would interest anyone considering using the Internet as a business marketing tool.

Raymond Worsham, an electronic commerce expert from the Electronic Commerce Resource Center (ECRC) Georgia Tech, Atlanta, Georgia, will conduct the morning session, "Getting Started on the Internet." The session will explore developing a Web presence (including discussions on strategy), locating a Web site, and getting your customer to the site. The session will also cover the marketing aspects of using the Web - making the sale by developing a need, taking the order, getting paid in a secure manner, and delivering the goods.

The afternoon is divided into two sessions: "True Stories about Internet Marketing" and "Ask Now or Pay Later - Critical Questions for Web Site Owners."
